Figure 1. The effect of the concentration of the Agrobacterium suspension on the transformation efficiency of Agrobacterium strains. The number of transformed cells was determined by the number of colonies growing on the selective medium. The results are the mean of three independent experiments. Error bars represent standard deviation.

The diagram illustrates a two-stage process. Stage 1, labeled 'Preparation', shows a system being initialized. Stage 2, labeled 'Measurement', shows the system being observed. A feedback loop connects the measurement stage back to the preparation stage, indicating that the results of the measurement influence the preparation of the system.

Figure 4. The effect of the initial concentration of the monomer on the polymerization of N-vinylcarbazole initiated by N-vinylcarbazole. The polymerization was carried out at 60 °C for 24 h in the presence of 0.05 mol/L of N-vinylcarbazole. The initial concentration of the monomer was 0.05 mol/L (○), 0.1 mol/L (□), 0.2 mol/L (△), 0.3 mol/L (◇), 0.4 mol/L (◇), 0.5 mol/L (◇), 0.6 mol/L (◇), 0.7 mol/L (◇), 0.8 mol/L (◇), 0.9 mol/L (◇), 1.0 mol/L (◇).

1. The first step is to identify the variables that are being measured. In this case, the variables are the number of children, the number of adults, and the total number of people.

Detailed description of Figure 1: The graph plots 'Percentage of total catch' on the y-axis (0 to 100) against 'Percentage of total effort' on the x-axis (0 to 100). Several lines represent different fish species. Yellow perch shows a very steep initial rise, indicating a high catch rate for a small effort. Rock bass and White perch also show high catch rates for low effort. Striped bass shows a more gradual increase. Other species like Rock bass, White perch, and Striped bass are also plotted. The graph illustrates that a small percentage of the total effort can yield a disproportionately large percentage of the total catch for certain species.

By now, you have had a chance to look at the \mathcal{H} and \mathcal{H}^* surfaces. The \mathcal{H} surface is a surface of constant energy, and the \mathcal{H}^* surface is a surface of constant energy and constant momentum. The \mathcal{H} and \mathcal{H}^* surfaces are related by the equation $\mathcal{H} = \mathcal{H}^* + \frac{1}{2} \mathbf{p}^2$, where \mathbf{p} is the momentum vector. The \mathcal{H} and \mathcal{H}^* surfaces are also related by the equation $\mathcal{H} = \mathcal{H}^* + \frac{1}{2} \mathbf{p}^2$, where \mathbf{p} is the momentum vector.
